OVERVIEW

This manual is a basic guide for Junior Handlers and for those who wish to improve their knowledge in Junior Handling in FCI shows. It hopes to work as an aid for youth participants in the handling process, by assisting as a study manual, with the basic support contents required for the student to practice and learn in their own time.

The FCI Youth Junior Handling Study Manual was created as a complementary reference to the official FCI Guidelines for World and Section Junior Handling Competitions, proposed by the FCI Youth group; approved by the FCI Show and Judges Joint Commission, and by the FCI Executive Committee in February 2016.

Both support documents were created as references for the maintenance of a Junior Handling sport that will prepare youths in handling dogs inside show rings, but also to encourage the foundation of healthy and bonding relationships between youths and dogs, and to help juniors in becoming more aware of what is required in order to be a Handler.

What is JUNIOR HANDLING?

The aim of Junior Handling competitions is to increase the youth's interest in Cynological activities, by promoting and developing the co-operation and contact between dogs and young people, and above all, by encouraging sportsmanship, friendship and welfare between youths and dogs.

Junior handling also involves the opportunity for youths and youngsters to learn more about different dog breeds, as well as their various types and characteristics. The sport encourages young dog lovers to gain knowledge of how to take care of dogs and how to maintain animal wellbeing. These values will help support further generations of consciousness and responsible dog ownership culture.

Throughout the year, Junior Handling competitions take place during international shows and in shows organized by official FCI National Organizations, granting youths the opportunity to be assessed by a Junior Handling Judge and where all participants should be equally evaluated on the basis of the official FCI Guidelines for World and Section Junior Handling competitions.

SPORTSMANSHIP

The best way for junior handlers to become familiar with junior handling is to watch Junior Handling competitions during dog shows. You will see how youths take part at all levels of competition, how they have developed friendships and have learned to compete and accept their wins and losses in a gracious manner. Friendships in Junior Showmanship Competitions can be created in many different ways. Once you become friends with your fellow handlers, you will find that most of them have feelings and goals that are very similar to your own.

Sharing and practicing together in Junior Handling is a great way to begin and learn how to handle dogs. As friendships develop with fellow junior handlers, you will then be able to help each other on improving your skills. By helping one another, you establish a team effort that can greatly enhance the overall and individual enjoyment of the sport. Regardless of your abilities you will always share the experience of winning and losing, so remember that this is a part of entering into any competition.

Winning is not the most important objective. The most important thing to remember when you are not placed in the competition is to be able to accept the Judge's decision and learn how to improve through further practice and learning; this can be achieved through individual effort, group courses, training programmes, study manuals and practice.

Keep in mind that the most important outcome of the competition is that you enjoy yourself and learn from the experience.

Also remember to praise and reward your dog(s), win or lose, because a lot of effort has been required from them too!

Good handling requires self-discipline and experience. You need to be able to accept the evaluators' opinion and remember to use this ability when it comes to the winners being announced in the ring.

On most occasions, after judging the day's Junior Handling Competition, the judge will be available to give advice to the junior handlers that were entered during that day.

SPORTSMANSHIP can be achieved in many different ways:

- Never crowd out or run too close to other exhibitors
- Keep your dog comfortable in the ring
- Accept the Judge's decision and don't worry about it
- Be friendly and help others
- Enjoy yourself and keep your calm
- Don't be angry or sad when you lose
- Remember to congratulate the winners with an honest smile
- Praise and reward your dog
- Make sure your dog is always safe and happy
- Enjoy and learn from the experience

BREED HISTORY

When choosing our dog, it is advisable to do some research about the breed's history and breed type, because it will help you to be more understanding of your dog's behaviour, specific features and breed requirements.

There are hundreds of dog breeds worldwide and the FCI recognises 343 canine breeds. Although many of them share common traits, the FCI places all recognized breeds into 10 distinct groups, depending on the breed type and functionality, this classification is called Nomenclature.¹ When you learn how to recognize different breed types, you will also notice that in time, it will be much easier for you to identify yourself with certain breeds, not only depending on their appearance, but also on that breed and that dog's lifestyle, function and character. This will soon prove to be helpful knowledge on choosing a dog, and also on how to successfully handle different dog breeds inside and outside of the ring.

BREED STANDARD

You can research more information about the dog breed you are handling, by downloading the FCI breed Standard, a document that presents guidelines to describe the ideal appearance, temperament and characteristics of each breed recognized by the FCI. Each breed has an official Breed Standard, which includes a lot of information you can learn from. The breed Standard is a way to ensure that the breed is healthy and fit for its utility and function. If a dog possesses a feature, characteristic or colour described as undesirable in the breed standard, it is strongly recommended that it should not be handled in a dog show.

Group 1: Sheepdogs and Cattle Dogs (except Swiss Cattle Dogs)

Sheepdogs and Cattle dogs are pastoral dogs that have a great ability to be trained with the function of herding their entrusted flock or herd. Dogs can herd other animals in a variety of ways. Sheepdogs and Cattle dogs actively round up cattle/ sheep with sound running skills, eye contact and barking. Herding dogs living only as household pets have pure herding instincts, even when not trained to herd farming animals. In general, these intelligent dogs make excellent companions and respond very efficiently to training exercises. These breeds ideally require owners who are skilled at training and willing to give them work occupations that remind these dogs of their strong herding instincts. Some of these breeds make for popular Police dogs, such as the German Shepherd, having many qualities that make them applicable for the job. Their duties include searching for explosives, searching for lost people, looking for crime scene evidence, and protecting their handlers

Group 2: Pinscher and Schnauzer- Molossoid breeds- Swiss Mountain- and Cattle Dogs

This breed group includes breeds with different origins, which were raised and selected to watch the persons, houses, properties and animal flocks belonging to their owners.

They are watchdogs.

Pinscher and Schnauzer breeds usually have a dark, smooth coat, and are greatly intelligent and adaptable. Dogs in this group include the Pinscher, Doberman, Schnauzer and Black Russian Terrier. Mastiff Type Dogs in this category usually possess a short, smooth and thick coat. Their weight varies from around 35kg to 65kg; with the typical height between 55 – 85 cm. Dogs in this group include the Boxer, English Bulldog and Rottweiler. Mastiffs are descendants of the most ancient types of breeds. Their ancestor, the molossus, was a ferocious type of war dog. They make fine companions and protection dogs.

Mountain Type and Swiss dogs come in various colors, with coats that are usually resistant to the cold and weather damage. Dogs in this category include the Landseer, Newfoundland and Pyrenean Mountain Dog. Some breeds, such as the St. Bernard and Bouvier Bernois, are used as rescue dogs to save people such as alpinists and travelers from snow storms and avalanches.

Group 3: Terriers

The name Terrier comes from the Latin word terra, meaning earth, and references their love of digging for the search of prey, such as foxes, moles, badgers, and rats. Terriers tend to retain their puppy-like cuteness deep into life, and they all share a lively, playful personality and an energetic nature.

Terrier breeds come in a wide range of sizes and shapes. These are usually territorial dogs, and will bark at people or animals that approach their property. They are also escape artists and usually highly intelligent dogs.

If you are interested in a terrier, make sure that you are aware of the fact that they do not necessarily get along well with other dogs, cats, birds or other pets. This has to do with the fact that terriers were bred to hunt small animals on farms and personal property. They aren't normally recommended for first-time dog owners. Many Terriers have wiry coats that must be kept clean of dead hair as to retain the proper texture.

Group 4: Dachshunds

For decades the Dachshund has been bred in three sizes: Teckel, Miniature Teckel and Rabbit Teckel, and in three different kinds of coat: Smooth-haired, Wire-haired and Long-haired). Dachshunds are scent hound dog breeds, who were bred to hunt badgers and other tunneling animals, rabbits, and foxes.

They are very social and love their family, wanting to be around them at all times. A typical dachshund is long-bodied and muscular with short legs. Its front feet are unusually large and paddle-shaped for extreme digging. The dachshund has a deep chest that provides increased lung capacity for stamina when hunting prey underground. Having long snouts with an increased nose area that absorbs odors.

Dachshunds are a very active dog breed and it is common for them to have big bursts of energy. Today their versatility makes them excellent family companions, show dogs, and small-game hunters. Dachshunds are brave, but they can be somewhat stubborn, and have an independent spirit, especially when hunting.

Group 5: Spitz and Primitive Types

Chow-chow

Basenji

Samoiedo

Pharaoh Hound

Alaskan Malamute

Podenco Canário

Spitz breeds include dogs characterized by long, thick fur, and with pointed ears and muzzles. The tail often curls over the dog's top line. Most of the spitz breeds seen today originate from the Arctic region or Siberia. In recent genetic testing of dog breeds, many Spitz breeds were found to be in the group closest to wolves, and presumed to be part of the oldest type of dogs. Through selective breeding, spitz breeds have been developed to be functional to humans mainly through hunting, herding, and pulling sleds.

Several types of Primitive dogs have developed in different parts of the world, travelling in boats through historic colonizers and developing during several centuries with little or almost no human intervention. Primitive breeds usually have reserved and suspicious temperaments, but this can be adapted to more sociable temperaments through socialization and interaction. Primitive types all share a common physical appearance, resembling a fox or a wolf, all bearing a pointed muzzle, a pyramidal shaded head and triangular shaped, erect ears.

Group 6: Scenthounds and Related Breeds

Dalmatian

Bloodhound

Rhodesian Ridgeback

Petit Basset Griffon Vendeen

Basset Hound

Beagle

Scenthounds were developed for trace tracking and finding prey. They are often used to hunt in packs, getting along well with other dogs. With a generally relaxed and affectionate temperament towards humans. Scenthounds are a type of hound that primarily hunts by scent rather than sight, and is regarded as having some of the most sensitive noses among all canines. Most of these breeds have long, drooping ears; helping them to collect scent and keep it near the dog's face and nose. Scent hounds need endurance and persistence so that they can stick with a scent and follow it for long distances over rough terrain. The best scent hounds can follow a scent trail even across running water and still when it is several days old!

Longer-legged hounds such as the Bloodhound or the Fox Hound run more quickly and require that the hunters follow on horseback; shorter-legged hounds such as the Basset Hound or the Beagle allow hunters to follow on foot. The Scenthound group includes dogs used for the tracking of game animals for hunting purposes, and of humans (as in search-and-rescue, and in fugitive capture). They are also used for explosive detection among other social benefits such as dog assistance and therapy.

Group 7: Pointers and Setters

Bracco
Italiano

English
Pointer

Vizsla

German
Shorthaired
Pointer

Weimaraner

Epagneul Breton

Pointers and Setters, are dogs trained for the examination of the field, by pointing and marking hunting game. They are medium-large sized dogs, with expressive eyes, and mobile ears, a very good sense of smell and with a special passion for searching prey. They are active through their character, and require plenty of exercise. They tend to be submissive with their owner, and very loyal companions. Earlier recorded pointer and setter breeds are believed to have been developed in Europe as far back as the 15th century. Pointers are characterized by the fact that, in the moment they are feeling the prey is near, they stop and “freeze” in a pointing position, with one leg raised and pointing their head in the prey’s direction, until the hunter is coming close. A setter silently searches for game by scent, hunting in a methodical manner. Setters get their name from their distinctive crouch or “set”, which is characteristic once they find their prey. All the breeds from this group accommodate easily in the life of an active family, and most of them enjoy the company of children, thrive on activities and enjoy being in the open air. Appreciated for these qualities and for their intelligence, many dogs from this group also became cherished companions.

Group 8: Retrievers - Flushing Dogs - Water Dogs

Portuguese Water Dog

American
Cocker

Golden Retriever

English
Springer
Spaniel

Clumber Spaniel

Flat-Coated
Retriever

Active and alert, many of the breeds included in this group are multi-functional and have been bred to work closely with people. These breeds enjoy long walks or runs and playing fetch. These dogs are resistant to tiredness and bad weather, with a good sense of smell and great passion for fetching. They are highly intelligent, active, friendly, gentle dogs, who enjoy working. Retrievers were bred primarily to retrieve birds or other prey and return them to the hunter without damage. As a result, retriever breeds are bred for soft mouths and a great willingness to please, learn, and obey. The retriever's willingness to please and trainability have made breeds such as the Labrador, Golden Retriever and Portuguese Water dog popular as assistance dogs. Spaniels were especially bred to flush game out of denser brush. By the late 17th century spaniels had been specialized and bred into water and land breeds such as the Clumber Spaniel and the English Springer Spaniel. Water dogs have dense, curly and water-repellent coats, to protect them in all types of weather conditions. They love people and are great family dogs. Water dogs often served water hunters and fishermen. A strong swimming desire, underwater swimming and no fear of water are characteristic features of water breeds.

Group 9: Companion and Toy Dogs

Japanese Chin

Chinese Crested Dog

Bichon Maltese

Bichon Frisé

Chihuahua

Papillon

The toy group is characterized by dogs with small sizes but strong personalities. The Toy breeds are mostly small, companion dogs.

Although they are of small size, except for the Giant Caniche, many Toy dogs serve perfectly well as watchdogs because of their barking tendencies. These breeds should have friendly personalities towards their owners and family, and they usually thrive on attention. They do not need a large amount of exercise and some can be quite picky with what they eat! Toy dogs are companionable and usually highly trainable dogs.

This group includes several dog types; some are small versions of hunting dogs, spitz, or terrier types, bred down in size for a particular kind of work or to create a pet of convenient size for the home. In the past, very small dogs not used for hunting were kept as symbols of affluence, as watchdogs, and for the simple purpose of companionship that has united humans and dogs for several centuries.

Group 10: Sighthounds

Irish Wolfhound

Saluki

Azawakh

Greyhound

Afghan Hound

Borzoi

Although today most sighthounds are kept primarily as pets, they have been bred for thousands of years to detect movement, chase and capture prey primarily by speed. The earliest description of a sighthound in European recorded history comes from the 2nd century AD. Most of the primitive sighthounds origin from Northern Africa, where breeds such as the Afghan Hound, Saluki or Azawakh were originally bred to hunt hares and gazelles by coursing and tracking prey by sight.

Some sighthounds such as the Borzoi or the Scottish Deerhound and Irish Wolfhound were used to hunt Deer's and Wolves. Most dogs in this category have smooth and silky coats in several colors. Sizes range from smaller breeds such as the Italian Greyhound, to larger sizes such as the Irish Wolfhound. These dogs specialize in pursuing prey, keeping it in sight, and overpowering it by their great speed and agility. They must be able to detect motion quickly, therefore they have great vision.

Sighthounds have a very flexible back and long legs for a long stride, and a deep chest to support their large lung capacity. Some have strong personalities, others are watchful or even hostile towards strangers, but the instinct to chase running animals remains strong.

OBSERVATIONS to keep when CHOOSING a DOG

Above all, the dog you chose to handle should be of a calm nature, with a good temperament and behaviour; preferably with whom the handler maintains a continuous and friendly relationship. Remember that even in the same breeds, each dog has its own personality!

If possible, junior handlers are advised to choose a dog that either belongs to, or lives with them, because that way they can train the dog at home and therefore develop a learning relationship and bond between themselves and the dog, helping both parts in learning together.

One should try not to handle a dog that is far too big or strong, because it is important to be able to always maintain harmony with the dog that is being presented, and if our dog has too much strength, or is still too young to participate, it is advised that handlers do not enter this dog in Junior Handling competitions until it is suitably trained. The size of the dog has to be decided according to the age and strength of the handler.

For the security of all participants, a dog that could be dangerous or a threat to its handler or any other person in the ring should not be shown. The Judge will be the person in charge of deciding if a dog is considered safe to be in the ring.

What else should I know about the dog I am handling?

In addition to the above, it is fully recommended that you know the dog's name, age, and individual temperament.

If the dog does not belong to the handler, it is advisable to ask its owner and/or breeder any important information that the handler should know about that specific dog before handling, and any extra advice that could be helpful.

Try to spend as much time beforehand with the dog you are handling, so that you both get familiar with each other. This will help you to become more comfortable together before entering the ring.

Choose a dog carefully and try to be sure that you both feel comfortable and safe with each other.

DOG PSYCHOLOGY

Have you ever wondered how dogs think? Dogs experience positive emotions similar to that of a human child. The presence of familiar humans triggers positive feelings in a dog's brain. Dogs can and do learn by modelling the behaviours of other dogs.

A dog can translate their owner's emotions and behaviours to the object a person is looking at. Therefore, dogs are able to understand the differences in human vocal tones and the general meanings behind them. Dogs can sense if you are feeling happy, and they can also sense when you are feeling nervous or agitated, therefore it is very important that you try to be as calm as possible when around your dog, and this includes the time before and when you are participating in something together. It is of no benefit to feel nervous anyway. Just try to relax, keep up the team work and be natural.

THE DOG LEASH

The dog lead should be a show lead, because house collars are not suitable for showing dogs in the ring. There are several types of show leads available and it is important to choose the most suitable lead in function of the dog breed that is being handled. The most important aspect is that the lead is comfortable for the dog's use as well as for use of the handler.

Junior handlers can get advice about what lead to use from breeders, owners, handlers and/or any person who knowledgeable on the matter.

It is also very important to position and carry the dog lead in the right way, depending on the breed the handler is showing.

Ultimately, the position depends on the specific dog breed, but all leads should be kept comfortable for the dog handled.

How the lead is placed depends on the individual breed. Some breeds such as sighthounds, Toy breeds, Daschunds and Terriers should be shown with the lead placed on the top part of the dog's neck, just below the ears. Breed types such as Hunting dogs, Retrievers and Working breeds usually benefit from a lead that is placed on the base of the dogs neck.

→ The lead should be cleanly kept inside the hand, because if it is dangling from the handler's hand, it will probably distract the dog and look less harmonious to the Judge and any observer, and because it might interfere, obstruct or get caught somewhere.

It is recommended that you use a lead that is comfortable for the dog and not too long or too short for the handler.

While showing any dog in a ring, the handler should always use the lead in his/her left hand and walk on the right side of the dog.

→ Under no circumstances should the lead drop on to the dog's body or be placed over the dog's face (happens frequently when showing the dog's bite).

HOW THE COMPETITION IS PROCESSED

Age Groups

- ❖ Only the single group aged 10-17 years will be allowed to take part in National Junior Handling competitions.
- ❖ Each FCI NCO's (National Canine Organisation) may issue national regulations for the division of participants into age groups or experience levels.

National Junior Handling Competitions

- ❖ Every junior handler who wishes to compete should be entered in the day's Junior Handling competition.
- ❖ Each FCI NCO's has a specific procedure for the entry registration; they could have entries on the closing day(s) before the show, or entry admissions only during the morning/day of the show;
- ❖ The Junior Handling competition should be announced by the show committee with enough time in advance to let juniors be prepared to compete;
- ❖ Handlers are placed in line on one side of the ring, stacking their dogs with about two meters distance from the other participants.

- ❖ The handlers can be placed according to their entry number, dog size or dog pace. These placements should be decided by the show organisation or requested by the Judge.
- ❖ Each handler will be individually evaluated according to the entry sequence. The first participant in line will be asked to place the dog in front of the Judge; it is recommended that handlers wait until the Judge is available to call them, so that the Judge can be able to evaluate the entire procedure of the handler placing the dog in the correct standing position.
- ❖ The Judge briefly examines the dog, simulating a breed ring judgement, and can ask to see the dog's bite and/or teeth.

- ❖ It should be the handler's responsibility to show the dogs bite.

❖ The judge indicates the figure(s) required in the individual handling time. The handler should know the pace and speed of the dog that is being presented.

❖ After completed the requested figure, handlers are advised to stand the dog in front of the Judge, before returning to their initial position.

❖ When all of the participants have made their individual presentation, the Judge will return to look at the participants together before making a pre-selection.

❖ The Judge evaluates the selected participants individually or in pairs, before making a final selection of the winning participants of the day's Junior Handling competition.

ENTERING THE RING

When entering the ring, it is recommended that participants remember the following advice:

- Be calm and move with balanced movements towards our dog
- Observe the other participants who pass their dogs before and after you
- Look at the Judge before entering the ring to see where the Judge is standing
- Listen to either the ring steward or the Judge as to where they want you to go
- Always listen carefully to the Judge's requests
- Make sure not to crowd the handler in front and behind you
- Always keep an eye on the Judge, so that you do not walk between your dog and the Judge
- When walking with your dog, be careful never to step over the dog's back - this is applicable particularly when handling smaller dog breeds
- If you are feeling nervous, take a deep breath and try to stay calm.

SETTING UP THE DOG

You are expected to be able to set up your dog in the same way as it would be set up in the breed ring. Remember that the dog you are handling should be shown in a specific way, depending on its breed and on its size.

The handler should have overall knowledge of the dog that is being handled, such as the breed's name, the dog's name and its age.

Most of the breeds are stood all fours square. The front legs of the dog are parallel and need to be positioned below the shoulders. The rear legs are usually positioned backwards as to have the hocks and feet of the dog vertical and at the width of the hips.

It is up to the handler to be able to position their dog in the breed's expected position. This information can be acquired from breeders or other experienced handlers. A handler should take the time to watch the breed judging of the breed they are going to be handling.

Tabled dogs should be placed on the table for the Judge's evaluation. Dog's should be placed safely towards the front end of the table.

Be careful that the dog is not placed too close to the edge of the table, to avoid any falling and causing of injury.

Most dogs are stood parallel to the ring side; however some breeds such as Bulldogs, and Staffordshire bull terriers, are stood facing the centre of the ring.

There are many ways to set up a dog for the Judges evaluation, but there are two main ways of showing that are frequently used in handling:

1. standing or kneeling behind the dog with the right hand holding the head of the dog either under the muzzle or by holding the lead above the head, while using your left hand to arrange the dogs feet, or to hold the tail;
2. standing in front of the dog, using a treat to incentivate the dog to free-stand itself

SHOWING THE DOG'S BITE

Showing a dog's bite consists in showing the mouth of the dog by placing a hand underneath the dog's chin to steady the dog's head, and with the other hand lifting the dog's upper lip and showing the front and side views, keeping the teeth together and never using force.

Remember not to cover the dog's eyes and nose with the leash when showing the dogs bite.

Showing the dog's bite will allow the Judge to check if the dog has a scissor bite, level bit or is undershot or overshot. Opening of the mouth can be requested by the Judge to check the dog's full dentition.

Participants should know if the breed they are showing has a specific way for showing the bite.

The handler should know about the typical dentition of the breed, and how to show it to the Judge.

Do you know how many teeth an adult dog has?

Be careful not to place yourself between the judge's view of the dog.

RING FIGURES

There are three basic figures that the Judge will expect Junior Handlers to know. The leash should be changed from one hand to the other as few times as possible. The lead is changed from hand to hand, depending on the Judges location, and with the purpose of keeping the dog into full focus during your presentation, as to not stand between the dog and the Judge.

Straight line

This figure is used to enable the Judge to see the dog's rear movement when going away, and to see the front movement of the dog when it is coming back.

- Observe the starting point of the Judge before starting to allow you to come back in a straight line to the Judge's position.
- The dog must be moved along the Judge's line of vision and returned along the same line.
- When you come back, present the dog in front of the Judge, facing the side of the dog to the judge. Once standing, the judge can move to see the sides (front, rear or other side) of the dog.
- Avoid placing yourself between the Judge and your dog.

Go out from point (A) to point (B), and then return on the same line from point (B) to point (A)

The Triangle

The Triangle figure is used to allow the Judge to see the rear, side and front views of the dog.

Observe the starting point of the Judge before you commence. The Judge should not find it necessary to move position to obtain the correct view of the dog.

The triangle should not be so wide as to be outside the Judge's line of vision, nor too narrow because the side view would be short. Aim for an equilateral triangle (all three sides' similar length). Avoid placing yourself between the Judge and your dog.

Go from point (A) to point (B) and then from (B) to (C). This should cross the Judge's line of vision. Bring dog back from (C) to (A) stopping approx. 2 metres away from the Judge and present the dog in front of the Judge.

The handler is required to leave from the judge and go around then return to the judge stopping approximately 2 metres (6 feet) from the Judge, stacking the dog or going back to the participant's initial position, depending on the judge's specific instructions.

The Circle

The Circle figure will aid the judge in observing the handlers individually or in a group.

The circle is one of the most common tasks asked by a judge in the breed ring. It is used so that the judge can observe the dog handled on the move from the side view.

The dogs move around the ring in an anti-clockwise direction, thus allowing for the dog to be on the judge side of the handler.

Handlers need to make a choice as to the size of the circle that they guide the dog to depending on dog's size and gait, and also depending on the ring size.

Around The Ring in Group

More Than One Handler

This figure is to watch the handler's control of the dog and the ring craft of all handlers. Handlers should use the whole ring unless instructed by the Judge.

Always keep the dog moving at a correct pace according to the size and breed of the dog. Never try to speed up just to reach the dog in front. Always move according the dog's pace.

A handler should be aware of both the other dogs in the ring and the Judge's location.

Handlers should be considerate of each other and never overtake or pass the participants in front of them.

Out and Back Together

The purpose of this task is so that the judge can compare the front and rear movement of two dogs, and to see the coordination of both handlers as they show their similar breeds.

Handlers should move their dogs at the same pace

The slower of the two dogs will need to set the pace.

Handlers must maintain full control of their dogs and keep both dogs during this exercise in the middle.

The handler on the left (view from the judge) should start this exercise with the dog on the right hand side.

Upon returning to the judge, the handler on the right should have their dog on their right. This is to allow the dogs to move together and not be placed between the two dogs.

DISTANCES IN RING

Another aspect to take into account is one's own distance from the dog we are showing:

It is advisable to be careful not to overshadow the dog's presence or even cover it unintentionally. Remember that the handler should blend into the background and should show the dog to its best, not the handler's best. A handler should combine with the dog to make a sound duo/pair.

It is common to see participants stacking their dogs very close to each other while waiting for their turn in ring. If the ring is large enough to do so, it is important to keep a distance of about one meter or a bit more from the other participants next to you.

If handlers are too close to each other, the judge will have more difficulty in recognising individual participants. Space will help handlers in keeping a safe distance from other dogs while moving and standing together.

We should also take into account the distance at which we place ourselves from the Judge. It is suggested that you place the dog about two meters from where the Judge is standing, presenting the possibility for the judge to observe the dog from a distance, as that will benefit your presentation.

HANDLERS CONDUCT

Any form of exaggeration in handling should be avoided because it will affect the whole balance and harmony of the pair and could also become a distracting factor for the other participants and dogs.

When we place our dog, we should not lean over our dog in a way that will disturb the harmony of the two, and interfere with the Judges assessment. E.g.: To set the dog's legs, we should do it gently and subtly, from the inside and not over the dog, avoiding any exaggerated leaning over your dog's body.

It is also not advisable to spend most of your time trying to fix your dogs hair, or to take dog-treats to another level, otherwise the dog will end up becoming stuffed!

It is absolutely not encouraged to give orders to our dog or pulling hard on the lead, we should not scold; act agitated or impatient in any way. The most important attitude to adapt when a dog may misbehave is to be gentle and firm, but with no exaggeration of movements. Just be natural.

Act calm and if the dog becomes aggressive ask the ring steward to help you.

Use your common sense and try to always remember the importance of being considerate and respectful towards others.

PERSONAL PRESENTATION

Clothing colours should not be too flashy or overshadow the dog that you will be handling. If you are handling a dark-coloured dog, it is recommended that you wear a light coloured suit, in order to highlight the contrast between the handler and the colour of the dog, bringing the dog into first view. Generally it is recommended the use of neutral, one-coloured outfits. Garments that will blend in well with the ground colour can also work but are not always easy to anticipate.

The handler is recommended to use appropriate and functional clothing and accessories, such as shoes and clothes that are well adapted to the soil conditions and to the size of the dog.

The handler's purpose is to bring the judge's attention more to the dog than to the handler.

The judge will evaluate the harmony of the pair; how they interact and work together.

IMPORTANT REMINDERS

- Junior Handlers should not take bitches in season into any Junior Handling Competition.
- Junior Handlers should not take aggressive dogs into any junior handling competition.
- Always keep the dog moving at a correct pace according it's size and breed.

- The exhibitor number should be on your left arm or on the left side of your blazer, where it can be clearly seen.

IMPORTANT REMINDERS

- Remember to learn about the breed and get to know the dog that you are showing.
- Know the breed's name, the age of the dog and the name you are handling.
- Listen to the Judge's instructions carefully. If unsure of the instruction, politely ask the Judge to repeat it.
- Learn how to show a dog's bite, both front and side views of the mouth.
- When returning to the Judge, set up or free stand your dog as requested.
- When returning to your line-up position, do not obstruct the view of other handlers from the judge. If necessary, walk behind the other handlers and take care not to upset other dogs.
- Avoid throwing food that will distract other dogs or even your own dog when moving. If food or any other object is thrown or dropped, handlers should be penalised for not picking up their bait.
- Always pick up any food or objects that you may drop.

COMMON JUDGING CONSIDERATIONS

During a Junior Handling competition, the following points are likely to be judged/evaluated:

1. Harmony and cooperation between the handler and the dog

The main focus of the evaluation process should be based on co-operation and good sportsmanship among the participant and the dog. The pair is sought to embrace an overall corresponding appearance, demonstrating a sense of teamwork and true-going presence.

2. The specific handling of the dog within its own breed

In motion (triangle, straight action and with turn)

Standing (as it is usual for the breed, with presentation on a table if required)

3. Knowledge and ability to show the breed

Overall knowledge of the dog handled, such as the breed's name and the dog's age.

4. Showing the dog's bite

Knowledge of handler to control the dog while showing the bite and/or teeth to the judge.

5. Presentation of the handler and dog together in a group

The object of judging is to observe the presentation of the handler's dog when being gaited in a circle together with other handler's dogs in the same manner. The handler should not stand out from the group and is expected to move in harmony with the dog's gait, and with regard the rest of the participants. Evidence of sportsmanship should be perpetual among all Junior Handling participants.

6. Changing dogs

The judge could ask handlers to switch dogs if he/she decides to do so, with basis on the purpose that all dogs are safely handled and show no signs of aggression or obvious reluctance.

In case the judge considers necessary to change dogs between handlers to make a final decision, the Judge should verify that all dogs are safely handled and show no signs of aggression or reluctance, making sure that the most important thing is to maintain safety between the dogs, handlers, judge and any other person inside, or near the ring.

7. Appropriate clothing and presentation of the junior handler

The Junior Handler and the dog should present a harmonious appearance as regards to clothing. The handler is recommended to use appropriate and functional clothing and accessories, such as shoes that are well adapted to the soil conditions and to the size of the dog. The colours of the handler's clothes should allow viewers to distinguish the dog's silhouette even from a distance, and any striking or inappropriate clothing is completely discouraged. Clothes that may interfere with the movement of the dog, or that could be distracting should be avoided.

8. Overall appearance of handler and dog

Because the overall focus of attention in dog-handling should be kept on the dog, it is recommended that handlers avoid standing between the judge and the dog, without the practice of any exaggeration, but rather relating to this method as part of the handlers main purpose, in being present yet discreet.
